White Over Pink.

The day of the lawn fete and the circus with its rediemonade has come, and the garden party girl must look to her toggery with care and solicitude, for she now has not only the others of her kind as rivals but the very lilles and roses of the field. With care, however, she need have no fear, for, though Solomon may have fallen short of these belies of the meadows in his appearance, levely woman at her best runs a very even race with them.

The garden party offers great opportunities to the woman of artistic taste to add to her leveliness. It is the opera box of the summer season where she may pose to ing conspicuous in her gorgeousness, for she is sure of the blossoming roses for a fitting background, even if her sisters do not equal her in brilliancy. At all events, leaving beauty out of the question, anyone will grant that a garden full of girls is more interesting than a garden full of flowers.

The dealers in women's linery must surely have had advance information as to the mode of entertainment that is to be most fashionable this summer, for every article, from the parasol to the dainty shoe seems to have been specially designed for lawn fetes of one kind or another. Hats, that fill one's leagination with dreams of tiny tables and rustic seats under the trees of some manorial Newport estate, perch stolidly pedestals in the milliner's windows as if trying to school themselves to their present incongruous environment.

One particular pink and whitehatarons my sympathy. It looked so out of place in the show window beside the other common looking headgear. It was nade of white mail, shirred in the brim as are those | bother much about a pretty pose, for he children's hats of white batiste. This | will give you a dozen while you are rackchildren's hats of white batiste. This part of it, however, was very little in evi dence, for what attracted the eye was the cluster of white estrich feathers that concealed the crown and leaned down over the edge of the brim to kiss the check of the lasty, who, alas! was not there. The brim curled up slightly on the left side to reveal the rink puffing that covered the bandeau, and pink ties a yard long were there, ready to the the "dream" upon the head of the fortunate purchaser

Although this was an important hat and had the milliner's unmistakable mark upon it, its charm was in the angle of the estrict plumes, and it occurred to me that it might be reproduced by the Woman was has the gift of tilting feathers. The hat proper, which, as before stated, was shirred, had a wire around the edge, and was stanted in the back so as to admit of a decided curve on the side. A plume fell over the brim on each side, the one on the right reaching slightly farther to front than that on the left. There were som: pink nots on top corresponding to the pink bandeau under the brim. The ties were set close together at the back and were made of five-meh pink motre ribbon. The whole hat was a picture which might be copied by one who is naturally gifted in the art of millinery and suggests a means of turning last winter's but into a flimsy summer thing. But it should not be attempted without the most heantiful plumes. nor by a beginner in the art of millinery.

Whether or not last year's heat has pointed its moral toward thin dresses, there seems to be an unusual prepon derance of this kind-lacy, fluffy affairs that are just the thing for garden parties. An organdle in plain lavender, for instance had billowy flounces foaming around the bottom of the skirt with creamy valen cleanes on the crest, so to speak. The lowest ruffle was straight, following the edge of the bottom of the skirt, but the two above it were festioned at intervals of about eight inches. The bodice was a valenciennes running up and down from neck to waist. This trimming, by the way te very cheap and pretty for any sort of thin waist. A dark blue dimity which was purchased on the bargain counter for 8 cents a yard will be trimmed 'n this manner with valenciennes at 75 cents for a dozen yards. Such a biouse is the easiest thing in the world to make. It does not require fitting except on the shoulders, and if it is made of dimity the lace may be sewed along the lines in the weave. It should be sewed about two mehes apart. A pretty way to make a thin sleeve is to shirr it up and down on the upper and lower seams; then, open ing it a couple of inches at the hand. simulate a cuff with four rows of half men valenciennes.

Do not put your ruffles straight arounthe bottom of the skirt. The more they are made to wander from the usual pathway the nearer do they attain to the height of fashion. The favorite plan seems to be to start the floguce right in front, and then let it wander whither it listeth. Some eventually reach the waistband at the back, while the rest fall by the wayside without actaining to such heights.

A white organdie, with vagarious ruffles like this, had them edged with black velvet and there were eight of them starting close together at the goal at the bottom of the ekirt in front, but in the race toward the back they became so scattered that it was nifficult to follow them. The sleeves were thirred down the outside seam, leaving four my tucks as a sort of heading, and at the oottom they were finished with a band of insertion and lace, being fastened together with loops and crochet buttons. Four curries, edged with black velvet, broadened it one can produce an up-to-date effect at much care for anything else point is to keep the upper part of the bodice smooth and flat and broad toward the shoulders. Below it may be fluffy and flouncy as you please. The long yoke is a very good device for obtaining this effect I have in mind a linen dress with a crean ace yoke ending in tabs over the shoulders The lower part of the bodice was trimmed with narrow valenciennes put onin squares which give the same effect and yet pre serve the curve at the waist. A co

Having children's photographs taken is a serious matter to the average household, a little less appalling, perhaps, than the measles or whooping cough, because the trial does not last so long or cost so much; but nevertheless it is an operation which upsets the family circle, makes pity of it all is that these miseries are elf-imposed, merely to gratify a spirit of vanity in the nother's heart.

Instead of striving to get photographs of their children just as they see them every day, running about the house, playing in the yard or dancing down the street to the music of a land-organ, women insid upon having a photograph that looks her heart's content in the most attractive. like a "fancy picture," as though any costume she can devise, with no fear of be"fancy picture" could be as attractive, as Winning, as satisfactory as a true like ness of the real boy or girl, the household pet. The child whose hair bas hong straight since he was born is compelled to submit to the manipulations of the curiing iron. The girl who lives in fresh neat, pink silk and a "picture bat." and the boy who is really a clever little athlete. who rides a wheel, sails a boat, manages a bronche pony and who is a tennis champion, is compelled to don "Lord Fauntie roy velvets" and pose with a little canmelancholy part of it is that the poor little fellow feels like an idiot, and the camera finds it out somebow and gives away the fact in every copy of the picture printed. The artistic picture is the natural pic ture, and no picture of a child is natural that does not represent it as happy, smiling and busy. the last qualification three being most important, for it is the secret of the whole art of posing chil-dren for their pictures. Make a child sufficiently at home in the photographic studio to feel free to play, leave him to his own devices, and you will not have to og your brain for one.

If a child is fond of animals, he sure to take a pet ca; or dog to the studio. Give him a chance for a bit of a romp, and while he is resting, perhaps curied up on the pintform or perched on a chair, with his pretty curis tumbled and his eyes dancing, catch his attention for ond, and prestot there is your photograph, filled with life, a genuine like ess to warm your heart at every glance. even after the taby has grown to boy hood and the boy to manhood.

One of the most charming photographs in existence is that taken recently of "Little Dottle." the English child actress. Although a fearless, clever actress, she would never consent to pose for her pic ture. When taken to the Fifth aver studio the subject of photographs was no mentioned. After looking at all the pretty pictures she curled up in a great chair, arranged without her knowledge directly in front of the camera. She was given a new toy, a huge Japanese dolly, to play with. The photographer attracted her at tention for a second by a question about the dolly, and the result was a picture that has become famous.

A similar instance of a charming photo graph is the last one of "Bahy McKee by the same artist. This famous White House buy likes all sorts of mechanical contrivances, with the single exception of a camera. But, best of all, he loves his Grandpa Harmon: so when Mrs. McKee decided that it was time to have the boy's photograph taken it was his grandfather who trundled him off to the studio, and in order to keep him happy, the picture was taken with the little fellow leaning against the ex-President's shoulder. At giance one can see that all fear of the camera is gone, that he has been asking a lot of questions and is waiting with eager eyes for an expected answer children photographed at home-in the out on the playground, on each in the summer time, or on board the yacht if they are sen-loving little chaps and at home in a pilot-house. The Gould children are always photo-graphed out of doors, either on board the Vigilant in full yachting regal'a, or riding their pet ponies at Lakewood, or perched up in a tiny trap, reins and whip n hand, ready for a spin over country lanes. They are fine, manly boys, remark ably athletic and strangely resembling their beautiful mother, from whom they indoubtedly inherit their love of storts Little Jack Webb, who will in time be one of the beaux of the Four Hundred, is another fearless little sportsman, who if he is photographed at all prefers to have it out of doors amid familiar scenes. An excellent photograph of this really levely child is taken on board a tiny steam yacht Clad in yachting flannels, he stands at the belm, contented, regulab and charmingly

A child who likes to drive will always pose well in a trap, or one who rides a wheel will be sure to take a natural pose if he is allowed to stand near his bicycle. If a boy has a mechanical turn of mind, let him have his tool chest, and if a girl is studious, give her a took, bearing in mind all the while that the object is to actually interest the children; not merely that they should handle the tools and the book to order, but that they should really play and read until the surround ings are forgotten, and then there will be no need to worry about the expression.

Of course this method of photographing children necessitates more time on the part of the artist and more patience on the part of the mother, but it is the only ness of a child and is well worth the extra time and money. The process of instantaneous photography which is being taken up by all pro gressive photographers, especially artists who make a specialty of doing children does away with all necessity of remain ing motionless before the camera more than a few seconds, so that the most fleeting expression can be caught and reproduced and often when the child is entirely uncor scious of being photographed.

possible way to secure an accurate like

It is always the test plan to take children to a artist who makes children his particular care. He is more likely to know

GARDEN PARTY GOWNS. sensitive teeth on edge, and yet the result model, by enterprising American dress-makers, is copied in blue muslin, of a pale shade, with belero of rose pink taffeta Time of Airy Frocks and Flov ery Hats. New York, June 12.-Golf and tennis and the collar and waistband done in iris velvet. The combinations, do not cease tourcaments, bicycle meets, open-air bazaars and strawberry teas are the predominating functions this month, that make with color alone, just as important are any arrangements in fabrics, piquet and velvet, grass linen and satin brown canvas and delicate lisse, French crepe and tweed being all united in the worthy cause of glorifying a lawn full of pleasure seekers A very good example of what has been A very good example.

hitherto considered an impossible contrast is shown alongside the hostess' dress of grees taffeta. The companion dress of green taffeta. The companion figure illustrates a lovely afternoon lawn party dress of the finest cream-colored French serge, claborately braided in cream silk cords. Within the linings are made of bright rose silk, and the bolero is with a fine ruching of rose-linted taffeta where it opens to show a full chemisette of Valenciennes lace. It is worth while just here to take oment's breathing space from the talk of gowns to say a word of the hat that crowns the model's head. This headgear may be formally introduced as the highest evolution this summer of the capote, and if a woman is so created in the likeness of her mother Eve that a capote becomes her, she should, for fashion's sake, prefer it to all other forms of head ornament. It is far more modish than the hat with a brim and in this instance the crushed small crown in of corn yellow straw, adorned in front with big rose-colored slik poppies, having black hearts, and at the back it is further embellished with a number of cops of black taffeta silk, wired to stand

But now for a word concerning black and white lawn dresses Too much cannot be said nor written in their favor. Moreover in consideration of the chic air of elegance they bear, small expense need be en-countered, and for girls of eighteen they are as appropriate as for women of forty ruffled skirt Here the petticont itself is of snow white swiss over a clear white silk slip, and two deep muslin flounces. set on in prenounced curves, are both edged and headed with a pretty imitation of black chantilly. Over the waist of white silk many bands of muslin are masses of black silk muslin, make it, in the achievement or amateur fingers, ments, of wearing short and perfectly duck or stiff dark blue piquet, with pretty blouses of ecru lace or cafe au lait embroi dery that have underbodies of bright colored china silk. The lace or embroider blouse fastens up on the left side, is caugh in at the waist by a belt of elastic gilt studded with mock jewels and a hip-sho frill of lace hangs out below the belt. A bright ribbon forms the collar, and, with inexpensive is the result.

a flower hat, a costume at once smart and Yet another picturesque fancy, adopted by the younger women, is that of wearing with duck and linen, or tweed skirts, even shirt-waists of the softest white mull, the bosons frilled and tucked, and over the skirts little scarlet silk boleros, that tailor-made guests on the lawn invariably carry long-handled parasols, covered with most brilliantly striped plaid silks, while in the butt end of every long stick is fastened a powerful eyegiass or a hollowed space with a gift top holds comfits or

In spite of the variation of fashion in favor of many new materials, orthodox gandle for warm Weather teas, open air fairs and the like, and it is well the old love for this charming material is not for

got. No sweeter gowns are to be imagine than the sheer organdies of this season figured in novel patterns, not so often of idealized liliputian fruits. The newest of the new are exquisitely figured in they cherries, in wild strawberries, and their leaves and flowers, in apple blossoms and red apples, and not least in loveliness are those showing wreaths of purple and green grapes and little panniers filled with

In effect these are as decorative as the bunches of white, dark red and crims flowers and conventional designs as of womankind still clings to the idea of or ire cut very short in the back.

gmelling-salts.

essorted fruits.

plain walking skirts of brown linen, while dividing her organdle skirt into panels by means of many narrow perpendicular lace flutings, or setting on quaint puffings of organdle, in white or solid color. To do this the skirt must be made very full and the waist, for a young and stender woman is best treated with a yoke effect and be neath this a blouse simulated, by means of many overlapping lace edged flounces that are narrow and full. The hat that ac-companies the organdle gown is, especially for a young face, marvelously becoming and though those bearing the Parisian trade-mark come very high, it can be made at home for little effort and less money. A burnt straw crown, a brim made all of crisp black muslin or lace frills, and a single warm, pink-hearted rose, with a little foliage, completes a miracle of millin-ery sweetness and simplicity.

This is only just to make mention of the very young women who, as well to their elders, attend teas and garden parties at this time of the year in company of those of their own age and revel in almost as much splendor of costume as their debu-tante sisters. As an example of what can be done in the way of a strictly modish toilet for a miss of twelve, the accompanying sketch is given. This illustrates a little white swiss gown, made over a slip of pick. The fullness of the waist's front is held in check by three bands of rose satin, fastening with jeweled buttons to one side, and the collar is of satin to match. Only the wide brim of the leghorn hat is left, its straw crown being replaced by one of shirred ros atin, fastened with a big rhinestone butter in front, and further decorated by a tower ing cluster of white plames behind. Black open-worked lisle thread stockings and low heeled black varnished leather slippers complete the garden party suit of this

LELAND'S SCOOP.

It was Saturday afternoon, and a sort of restful quiet had fallen upon the office. A broad, yellow sunbeam glinted across the desk of the typewriter girl, but she did not ask the office-boy to "pull down the shade, please," because she was listen ing to a story which the snake editor was telling.

nutiously, "when I was on the Duily in the office that ever you saw. There had been a big church row in one of the was sent hot foot to see about it. He came back pretty late, took the only type writer end of names and particulars, you know.

"The next morning the managing editor wrath in his eye. Trailing up the stairs a minute he wished he was refereeing a family scrap in Goat alley. Finally be

"It was there all right. Oh, yes, it was there, names and all; in fact, the names were the most conspicuous part of it. But you ought to have seen the language that was used. Every kind of sporty, shangy, entransistable phrase that you can think of, and there was a pretty good sprinkling of awear words, too. In fact, it was written up in just about the style that a man would use to write up a dog Leland is particularly fissy about his Eng-I've heard him argue half an hour with a fellow about the proper use of the subjunctive mood. He declared up and down that somebody must have meddled with it, and everybody declared he hadn't, of course; and there was as pretty an argument as you ever saw on a field day in longress. Finally the little office boy spoke up. 'I know what's de matter,' said he Mr. Leiand used de sporting editor's ma-bine ter write dat stuff, and dat m done been Acodooed. Can't nobody but Mr. Biff use her?'

the Middle Ages.'
"But the boy insisted, and finally one of the church people, a pretty girl about twenty, said she was a typewriter and would try it. So she sat down and began o write, 'I Want to be an Angel,' and

"Oh, come now," said the White House

A Convenient Belt.

is always ready to put on, without any pinning or tying, is made of two lengths of ribbon laid in folds. The ribbons cross at each side and form a point in the front and back. To make the belt, take three whalebones five inches long and two lengths of ribbon each a little longer than the waist measure. Sew one whale-bone across the middle of each ribbon forming the back of the girdle. Cross the ribbons where they would come to flowered muslins, and in their make-up the sides when around the waist, and sew whalebones to each end, forming a point in front like that at the back. Sew four hooks and eyes on the front whalebones and the belt is ready to put on at a mo-ment's notice. Narrow ribbon should be A last refuge from the wholly common-place has been taken by the dressmaker in put on to hide the bones in front and back little woman of the world.

"It was some years ago," he began

Planet, that we had the most awful mix-up fashionable congregations, and Leland, who was death on a sensational story, that wasn't in use, and rattled the story that wasn't in use, and rattled the story off as fast as he could make his fingers water they were stewed in retained, the hit the keys. I don't believe he even looked whole boiled up together, with a good halfat the manuscript, but he thought it would be all right, because he is one of these bot. instinctively correct mortals. It made a column and a half of a scoop, and gave no

"The next morning the managing editor size, and by their use all discoloration or came up to the city department with "tinny" taste is avoided. If scalded behind him were about a dozen weeping New tin is all right, but it is difficult to females, headed by a man in a white have it always new; however, fruit juices choker, who was taking very hard. Lemost not be allowed to stand even in the shinkest of tin. Crocks are the right hand happened to be there, and in abouthalf got hold of the morning paper and looked at his story.

'Oh, get out,' said Leland, 'this isn't you should have seen the stuff she turned out. She nearly had hysterics. Well, that settled it, but I tell you, Leland never louched that machine after that,"

A convenient form of ribbon belt, that

FOR EARLY JUNE.

When Fruit Is Abundant and Cheap and Preserving Is in Order.

With June roses come pineapples, in perfection and at their very cheapest. The strawberry pineapple, which appears in such abundance during the latter part of May, does very well between whiles, but the perfection of this fruit is found only in the South Sea Island parempple, which finds its way to us with the first month of summer. While this highly-flavored fruis is cheap, and may be secured of perfect ripeness, preserves and srups for fruit drinks should be bottled. Currants are also at this season at their best for preserving. Later on, when better for table use, they have lost much of their natural gelatin. The beautiful "cherry currents" are not as good for preserves as the early, smaller variety. The first week in Jone usually also brings the best strawberries for preserving. A point well worth remembering when preserving is that when cooking whole fruit the shape is kept and wooliness avoided by adding a quar-ter of a teuspoonful of powderest altim to every quart of water, the fruit to beci tender in this and then drained and added to the simp, and cooked long enough for the sweeiness to penetrate.

Follow the directions given below, and when any fruit is at its most pe stage and with the natural flavor. that the fruit is not over ripe, wipe, but do not wash, fill the wide-monthed glass jars two-thirds fall. For every pound of allow half of granulated sugar-Put the sugar in a percelain-lined sauce-pan with a cup of water for each pound; when it comes gradually to a both full the jars full to overflowing the elastic band should be left on), then stand them in on pet of cold water, with plates or straw ou the bottom to keep the jars from-tocching, allow the water to boll, and the contents of the jars also to become boiling bot, have some hot strop near at hand to make sure the jars are full, and screw down the covers at once.

In preserving time, if new elastics for the glass Jars run short and stores are not convenient, hard impossible looking bands may be made soft and pliable by soaking in water that has one tablespoon of ammonia to two of water. From five minutes to half an hour will bring about the desired result.

Grape preserves are often not a success because the skins are not cooked alone in a little water until tender; they require good, steady simmering. When the pulp is squeezed out it must be stewed until tender and the seeds come away easily. It is then to be put through a hair sieve and

Many otherwise well-furnished kitchen cupboards are without that most necessary convenience, a hair sieve. They cost only from 25 to 35 cents, according to after using they are kept sweet and cleathing.

Many housekeepers, who have stewed tomotoes almost daily while the season lasts, avoid the heat and later of canning a large amount at once by cooking enough extra each time to fill a quart glass jart it is surprising how the filled fars account late. Extra squash and pumpkin may be cooked and preserved in the same way.

Our grandmothers always took care to have a little balled-down elder in the storeroom for using in fruit cake, mince ples and the like, as it is theaper and better than brandy for this purpose. Our readers are advised to provide themselves with a quart. To make this quantity five quarts of cider must be toiled gently until all but one has evaporated. Bottle while hot. Remember that this is very strong, and a tablespoonful goes a long way.

When paring and coring apples and peaches wash them first; the skins and res thrown into cold water brought slowly to the boil and stometed a while will yield a strongly flavored liquor that may be converted into evrup or jelly. Never throw away the water in which green peas are boiled. It makes delicious cumulation for a puree, or, with the addition of milk and sometimes a little if the shells of young peas are also belled therein, nothing more is needed.

The season is here when friends are arriving by late trains. "Something hearty" is necessary for the tired travelers, and as it ought to be a warm, but not warmed over, dish, it must be made a study by the mistress herself. A chop or two may be made delightfully tender and juicy, and will not smoil if the train is belated, if treated as ollows: Sprinkle pepper and salt upon the ctops, then dredge with flour; put upon a strong plate; add a teaspoonful of water; cover with another plate the same size, and put in a very slow oven for an hour. Serve on the top plate, which at the last is turned down, and thus the chop is not disturbed. This is cooking on scientific principles, and until tried the scientific result can hardly be guessed at.

Gorgeous Shoes and Gloves.

Gloves come in so many different shades this season that it is possible to have a pair to match every gown. Pale blue for a street glove stems a little extravigant, but it is extremely fatching when worn with a gown to match. Green is one of the most fashionable colors, along with purple, and, as very few dresses are n up without a touch of one of these tints, is perfectly safe to buy them, as they will be found quite as serviceable as white, which, though seemingly the most extravagant, is really the most economical glove worn, always supposing that it is a dressed kid, that can be desned. Shoes also come in many brilliant hues, of which green and purple are the chief.

Summer Cushlons. The summer girl's outfit is not complete without at least one pretty hammock piliow and another for the veranda. Of ourse, by this it must not be supposed that the young woman expects to make a practice of entertaining her friends in a re-cining position, but one often feels the need of a reftening influence upon the hard pillars of verandas, and in a hammock it is often difficult to sit upright very comfortably unless one is well backed with becoming cushions.

Camera Improvements.

As the bicycle approaches nearer and nearer to perfection, thus making the new wheel with every year an unwarranted extravagance, the fad is being transferred to the camera and the kodak signs are constantly being made, and it rou haven't got a '97 camera you are outof date. A complete set of developing materials and atensits seiling at $1.50 has been put on the market this year, and as 19 s in very convenient form it can easily be taken away to the country for the

Ill-Fitting Etons.

An Eton jacket, which seems the simplest kind of an undertaking, she with the greatest care. If it doesn't fit it is a very ugly garment, indeed, and gives the wearer a decidedly ungainly appearance. There is no excuse for an ill-fitting jacket of this kind, for continued experiment and alteration will remedy it; and, as there are only four seams to change in any case, one ought not to gradge the labor spent on them.

taken of a grave, shy child is to tell

Black and White.

to have its picture taken, the chances are in favor of a good likeness; and plan ciothing is not only better for the child.

but it photographs better. A look of hapment any child requires, childhood itself own pretty way, and if the photographer

A simple rule about colors is to avok them entirely. Dress a child all in white.

and the photographer will have a chance to do his best for you.

Black and all dark colors take less clearly and add to the artist's work in finishing proofs. Red and bright blue are no better and yellow is not popular. Pale green photographs look well, as do bright pink, ciel blue and lavender, especially a pinkish lavender; but white is the best of all, and every child is bound to have on plain white frock.

is an artist he will do the rest.

"You see," says the up-to-date photog-thrilling tale, a story of adventure

a was little"-anything, in fact, ex or a fairy tale or a true story about "when cept to tell it to "keep quiet and smile."

If a child is dressed in "every-day clothes" and does not know it is going the effect at the top of the sleeve.

In making any sort of bodice one point should be remembered, and by heeding piness and contentment is all the adorr being far more attractive than finery rapher, "there are really no rules to be given about posing children, because it should never be done." The only important thing is to let a child be happy in its

to suggest a plaid pattern The blouse with pouch front appears on almost every thin dress worn, and is very generally becoming. In its place, for those who dislike to conceal the lines of the figure, lace flounces may be substituted with this device appeared at a recent garden party. The lace flounces sloped up to a point in Trent to meet the band of in section at the lower edge of the yoke. The point was repeated on the skirt in lace. Insertion and lace trimmed the bottom of the skirt. The sleeves were shirred all the way up and were trimmed at the

ANNIE LAURIE WOODS.

The want of the said circle to accompany a child. The variou members are sure to offer a great deal of advice, and they cannot avoid the temptation to do a little posing. Their own nerv busness reacts on the child, and even the photographer suffers when there is an invasion of a half dozen women to superintend the "taking" of one poor little

TO PACK HATS.

How the Woman With the Baudbox May Be Suppressed.

The summer hat is one of the most difficult articles in one's wardrobe to pack. That is why the old joke about the women and her bandbox has been kept green so long. The fear of com mitting one's precious bonnet to the tender mercles of the trunk man has led woman from time immemorial to burden herself with the most ungainly boxes and thereby to gain for herself the reputation of being the most uncomfortable of trav eling companions. With care and Judg-ment, however, the bandbox may be avoided. If your trunk is I ned with canvas, as most trunks are nowadays, the hate may be nicely secrued with tapes and pins The pieces of tape should be pinned four sides of the hat in places where the pin holes will not show, and then stretch to the sides of the trank where they are planed to the canvas. If there is no canvas lining, the tapes will have to be secured to the trunk with tacks, and a better substitute for the tapes would be coarse white thread sewed through the hat and then wound round the tack heads To remove the hat, cut the threads and pull them out, after lifting it from th tray. One can pack several hats in a large bandbox to send by express by sew ing them to the sides of the box. The thread is sewed through the box and knotted on the outside. A little soft tissue pape should be used to support the trimmings and to fill the crown.

Pack Dressed in Paper. The advent of the small sleeve has sim plified the packing problem considerably. The puffs are no longer there in their former voluntinousness to require reams of tissue paper. The paper, however, can be profit ably transferred to the pouch fronts of thin dresses, and to the neck-bands and the way up and were trimmed at the shoulder with lace flourness and bows. The graph. Every artist loves long lines and and indeed any shoes will be the better for a paper stuffing and wrapping. One it there crept a chateline. The nat was a round one and trimmed with pleatings a round one and trimmed with pleatings.

Don't starch a child's freck for a photo- and indeed any shoes will be the better for a paper stuffing and wrapping. One who is desirous of preserving the fresh- picture, as does a broad-brimmed hat trimmed with meadow flowers. trimmed with meadow flowers. limit their little ways, is usually patient and crisp lawn, light silks and organdles and drawn, each one edged with narrow black Swiss naslins actual requisites in every woman's wardrobe. What, with the williant colors these costumes reflect, button of cut steel. and the flowery hats their weaters adopt, even the smallest garden party presents even the smallest garden party presents and white is the picturesque little suit an amazing blaze of color that smould quite in the large sketch, illustrating the best put to shame even the peonies, fuchsias, use of narrow black veivet ribbon on and like gaudy Mosseurs, which are quite outdone by their human rivals.
Women who can afford it have their per.

FOR WEAR ON THE LAWN.

While it is true enough that no more artistic contrast is known in a musica gown this season than black lace with from top to tee, a costame entirely with white lawn, in the majority of cases very in the achievement or amateur fingers, gorgeous effects are still striven after. If need be. Cardinal colored hats continue to hold a commanding position. The very new calar followed this season, at tens and tourns is red violet, vying for pre-eminence in fashionable patronage with Egyptian iris, the most flaming shade of purple known. All of these glowing tenes, on a black ground of green foliage and blue sky, form a picture well worth seeing, while the details of the toilets are sometimes as astonishing as tenutiful. This summer, at least, so very lovely are the afternoon parasols, that a woman who attends an outdoor party can wear her hat or not as she pleases. Hostesses so far have abjured their hats and carry sunshades to exactly match their gowns some of them showing silk domes with tig lace butterfiles appliqued onto the silk, but the net wings left free to flutter in every breeze. One and all, these fulldress parasols have extremely long handles. howing great extravagance and beauty concentrated in the handles. An ivory shepherd's crook, prettily iniaid, a long gold iniaid ebony staff, with a tiny miniature topped comfit box set in the end, or a remarkable twisted serpent, colled near the head and with jeweled eyes, are among the novel and costly sticks, on which flounced canopies are mounted for use with

Just the way the parasol is used is explained in the accompanying sketch lislaying a hostess gown of many flounces. But, besides its flounces, this toilet shows to what length combinations of colors have gone. The suit has a foundation of pale green taffeta silk, decorated up to the knees with six kilted flounces of well-starched eline de soie, the exact color of the foundation. Above these plaitings is laid on the silk an insertion of ecrulace, headed by a puffing of silk muslin to match the ruffles below. As to the waist, its yoke is green alk everlaid with ecru lace, and then, between boleros of sky blue Japanese satin worked in steel beads and edged with a Tom Thumb fringe of green muslin, falls a downy vest of green silk muslin puffings. Both the collar and girdle are formed of cerisse-colored velvet, while the sleeves are of green slik overlaid with scru lace and finished at top and bottom by puffings of green muslin.

The mention of green, blue, and cerise skirts are invariably elaborately treated. Lace is either set on in many flounces or let in in wide and narrow insertion, outlining the well-known Greek key pattern.

A last refuge from the wholly common-